

My Favorite National Hero

Today, I want to tell you about my favorite national hero. His name is Allama Muhammad Iqbal. He was a very important person in our country, and I really like learning about him.

Allama Iqbal was born a long time ago, on November 9, 1877. He was not just a hero, but also a poet, philosopher, and thinker. He used to write beautiful poems that talked about the love for our country and the importance of unity among the people. I like his poetry because it makes me feel proud to be Pakistani.

One of his famous poems is "Lab Pe Aati Hai Dua Ban Ke Tamanna Meri." It means that a prayer comes to my lips like a wish. This poem is about asking for good things for our country and its people. It makes me think about how we should all pray for the betterment of Pakistan.

Allama Iqbal also dreamed of a separate country for the Muslims of India, where they could live freely and practice their religion without any fear. That dream came true when Pakistan was created in 1947. I think it's amazing how his ideas and dreams helped our country become independent.

He also believed in education and wanted the people of Pakistan to become knowledgeable and strong. This is another reason why I like him. I love going to school, and I want to study a lot, just like he wanted us to.

Even though English is not my best subject, I still try my best to learn and improve. Allama Iqbal's words inspire me to never give up and keep trying, just like he did in his life.

In conclusion, Allama Muhammad Iqbal is my favorite national hero. His love for Pakistan, his beautiful poetry, and his dreams for a better country make him very special to me. I want to be like him and work hard for my country too. I am proud that he is from Pakistan, just like me.
